“ Scott,

I've come to this page many times since I learned of your passing. I've wanted so much to put into words what your friendship meant to me, but I've struggled to do so. There are so many memories of my summers in Michigan.

The first thing I would do—after greeting my grandparents—was hop on my bike and ride down to see if you were outside playing. (We didn't have cell phones back then.) I remember the kickball games at the school behind their house. I always wished you could come visit where I lived, but that never happened.

I remember the last time I saw you. We were visiting from Ohio—old enough by then to drive and drink. I took my parents' van, and you and I went to play pool. Afterwards, we bought a six-pack and sat in the back of the van, drinking and talking. That was the last time we saw each other.

Over the years, I tried to find you—just to say hi and see how you were doing. In 2005, I moved to South Carolina. I eventually found you on Facebook and saw that you were living in North Carolina. So close! Yet, we never made contact.

I'm so sorry I never got to meet your family or know much about your adult life. But you'll always be in my heart.

*Love always,
Teddy. (Your Ohio Friend)*

Ps. I will stop back later (maybe we can chat more)
